

Articles Appearing in the Martinez Local Papers

We've been busy here in Martinez. On Sunday we had a honey oil lab explosion in a residence. Neighbors thought it was an earthquake. We'll be looking at manufacturing and arson charges (suspect was house-sitting for someone when the butane exploded). Here's the cite for the Contra Costa Times story:

And then we had a home-invasion robbery where masked men put a pillow case over a woman's head, pistol whipped her and demanded to know "where's the stuff?" Police were called to the hospital, where her boyfriend refused them access to the crime scene. Police on-scene smelled marijuana and were preparing a search warrant. The officers left behind to secure the scene saw 3 guys hop the fence to the back yard, kick in a shed and try to steal marijuana plants. Those 3 are in custody, still looking for the 211 suspects. Here's the site for the story on that one:
